

Health Education

The process by which individuals or groups of people learn to behave in a manner conducive to the promotion, maintenance, or restoration of health. The ultimate aim of health education is positive behavioral modification.